Restaurant plans reboot after ex-chef's arrest

Food. A legendary Philadelphia chef comes to the aid of a beleaguered eatery after its ex-chef was hit with child porn charges.

COURTESY OF AL B. FOR / PROVIDED

Crow & the Pitcher co-owner Michael Franco heard about the charges against Alex Capasso — a chef/partner in their elegant Rittenhouse area eatery — as many did: at the end of a Friday through smartphone tsunami.

"It was July 24 and I was coming into work when I got a 'no-way-you've-got-to-see-this' text from one of my bartenders," said Franco. "I couldn't believe what I was seeing."

Neither could Georges Perrier, a Philadelphia chef legend and one-time employer of both Capasso and Franco. "It was horrible and inconceivable," Perrier said.

What Franco read disgusted him: Capasso had been arrested and charged in a federal child pornography investigation after he was caught allegedly sending undercover task force agents — across state lines — explicit photographs of a 5-year-old niece of his ex-girlfriend, shots insinuating he was the photographer.

After allegedly telling the agent about sexually abusing that same girl, Capasso allegedly said he couldn't wait to molest his own soon-to-be-born daughter (his current girlfriend is pregnant) the first time he was alone with her.

"I was shocked," Franco said. "So was our partner Prajakta [Harshe-Patharkar]. "I did, however, know something was up with Alex as he wasn't in work that whole week. … I figured he was arrested, but nothing such as this."

Capasso's lawyer, Maranna J. Meehan, did not respond to calls for comment by press time.

Franco also knew he had workers at Crow & the Pitcher to consider: sous chefs, line cooks, waiters, washers and bartenders, and felt something had to be done to let the neighborhood regulars and local diners know that no money earned since Capasso's arrest would go into his pocket for his legal defense.

"He isn't going to see a dime of this money," Franco said tersely. "There is no involvement with us or financial support. He's out."

All parties want Capasso's name stricken from the Crow — a name with which they're likely to rebrand their 50-seat, French-inspired South 19th Street restaurant — from its liquor license and his role as executive chef, a job that's currently being held by Perrier.

"Everyone from the neighborhood has been so supportive, it's moved me to tears — dining here without a hitch, restaurateurs offering to help buy groceries. Then Georges called," Franco said.

Franco worked for Perrier as a sommelier for six years before opening the Crow and had remained friends with the Le Bec Fin legend.

"I was working with Marc Vetri in his restaurant the night the news broke and was dumbstruck," said Perrier. "I got off the line to call Michael. I just wanted to help immediately."

Franco said Perrier offered his aid that night and with Crow sous chef Gregory Headen began rewriting the Crow's menu for the start of Restaurant Week and beyond with "a bistro" feel. For this, Perrier is taking no money. "Michael and his crew worked too hard for too long to make the Crow work," he said. "I will help them in whatever way they need for however long they need me."

What's next

Starting Tuesday, Perrier's lighter, "straightforward" menu goes into effect for lunch and dinner with a new lineup.

- There will be a great emphasis on their cheese cart with rarer summery items than previous.
- After Restaurant Week, Franco, Headen and Perrier will expand the menu even further.

Hitchhiking robot meets its demise

@THEBEARDEDONE86; @COG2286 / REBECCA TANNENBAUM

Science. A social experiment ended abruptly in Philly.

If advanced alien life exists in the galaxy, they're likely steering clear of our planet because of stuff like this.

HitchBOT is, or rather was, a Canadian robot experiment. The robot's mission was simple: explore the planet by way of hitchhiking. It worked by relying on the charity and goodwill of human beings to pick it up, drive it a distance, and drop it off, leaving the intelligent machine to be picked up by other science-minded folks. In other words, hitchBOT was really about human beings and how they act more than it was about robotics.

That is, hitchBOT's experiment was working just fine in America until it reached Philadelphia, whereupon hitchBOT was vandalized and destroyed.

On Facebook Sunday, hitchBOT posted: "Oh dear, my body was damaged, but I live on back home and with all my friends." The robot, or rather its designers, went on to say that "sometimes bad things happen to good robots" and that the American juncture of the experiment "must come to an end for now."

In an even more grotesque violation, the Associated Press reported that the robot's "creators were sent an image of the vandalized robot Saturday but couldn't track its location because the battery was dead. They said they don't know who destroyed it or why."

The CBC reported that children who followed hitchBOT on social media were expected to be "heartbroken."

HitchBOT hitched a ride to Philadelphia over the weekend, where it was traded off with local YouTuber Jesse Wellens, who on Saturday night left it in Elfreth's Alley for it to "hitch" another ride. That's where it encountered the individuals who decided to destroy it.

"It's a shame that it was destroyed, especially when so many people took interest in it and the team from Canada poured such time and effort into it, but we can't pin what happened on the city of Philadelphia," said Colin O'Gallagher, who drove hitchBOT to Philly. "One person trashing a robot that they perhaps didn't understand its significance is not worth vilifying a city."

HitchBOT traveled across Canada and Europe without incident, and entered the U.S. two weeks ago.

Yo, Adrian! Stallone to put his 'Rocky' gloves up for auction

Rocky's boxing gloves will soon be up for sale at an auction.

Actor Sylvester Stallone, 69, is reportedly auctioning off memorabilia from some of his most famous flicks, including the boxing gloves he wore in the hit Philly-set film series, reports said.

Among the hundreds of items are Rocky Balboa's robe, trunks, heavyweight championship belt and his Harley-Davidson motorcycle; John J. Rambo's U.S. Army jacket, poncho and knife; and more than a 1,400 other props.

Public exhibits of the Stallone memorabilia are scheduled to be held in Dallas, New York, Los Angeles, London, Berlin and Hong Kong.

Heritage Auctions will moderate the Stallone sale on Oct. 14 and 15 in Los Angeles and online.

Stallone released a statement saying: "I saw the John Wayne auction and I thought it would have been so much more effective if John Wayne had still been alive so he could explain to his fans what some of his pieces meant to him. I'm not that young, but still aware enough to appreciate the people that will appreciate owning [these items]."

Stallone / WIREIMAGE

Part of the proceeds will go to military charities, according to Heritage.

The Philly-shot "Rocky" spin-off "Creed" hits theaters Nov. 25.

Manatee spotted in the Delaware

A fisherman snapped a picture of a manatee in the Delaware River near Bordentown, New Jersey, last week — the first sighting of such a creature in the state since 2009. The marine herbivore was seen in the Bordentown Marina. Manatees are sometimes called sea cows, and tend to prefer the warmer waters of Florida or the Carolinas. Sightings farther north are much rarer. DAN KELLEY

Illegal hunt

Pittsburgh doctor linked to second Zimbabwe lion hunt probe

Zimbabwe has linked a Pennsylvania doctor to an investigation into illegal lion hunting, naming him on Sunday as a client of a safari operator accused of breaching regulations, a week after an American dentist was accused of illegally killing the country's most famous lion, Cecil.

Dr. Jan Seski, who runs a practice in Pittsburgh, was named by Zimbabwe as a client of Nyala Safaris, owned by a landowner who has been arrested on accusations of conducting an illegal hunt.

The doctor was in Zimbabwe in April, according to a statement issued by Prince Mupazviriho, permanent secretary in the ministry of environment, water and climate. REUTERS

Traffic stop. Manhunt underway for killer of Memphis police officer

A manhunt was underway Sunday in Tennessee for the killer of a Memphis police officer who was fatally shot during a traffic stop on Saturday night, officials said.

Sean Bolton, 33, died from multiple gunshot wounds after being discovered critically wounded at about 9:15 p.m. local time Saturday, Memphis police said. A citizen used the officer's radio to report the shooting, police said.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal reported via Twitter that police surrounded an apartment building on Sunday morning looking for a suspect related to the shooting but left and apparently did not make an arrest. Police also recovered a handgun in a field near the shooting scene, the newspaper reported. Memphis police could not be reached for comment.

Bolton had worked for the Memphis Police Department since October 2010. He is the third Memphis officer to be shot and killed in just over four years. REUTERS

Malaysia says airplane debris is from same type of aircraft as MH370

Flaperon. Reps from the U.S., Malaysia, China, France and Boeing are due to participate in a verification.

Police officers inspect metallic debris found on a beach in Saint-Denis on the French Reunion Island in the Indian Ocean on August 2, 2015, close to where a Boeing 777 wing part believed to belong to missing Flight MH370 washed up last week. / GETTY IMAGES

Malaysia said on Sunday that airplane debris that washed up on the Indian Ocean island of Reunion has been identified as being from a Boeing 777, the same model as a Malaysian Airlines plane which vanished last year.

Experts hope the 6.5- to 8-foot wing surface, known as a flaperon, and a fragment of luggage also found on Reunion could yield clues on the fate of Flight MH370, which disappeared without trace in March 2014 with 239 passengers and crew on board.

Low said Malaysia is contacting authorities in territories around Reunion to see if they can help if other objects suspected to come from a plane are found.

More pieces of metal debris found washed up on Reunion were taken into police custody on Sunday, but it is too early to say what they are, said a source close to the French investigation.

Discovery of the debris may finally confirm MH370 crashed into the sea after veering off course from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing, helping to end 16 months of lingering uncertainty for relatives of the passengers and crew.

Investigators believe someone deliberately switched off MH370's transponder before diverting it thousands of miles off course. Most of the passengers were Chinese.

The debris will be analyzed at a lab staffed by 600 experts that is operated by the French defense ministry.

The luggage fragment has been sent to a police unit outside Paris that specializes in DNA tests.

If the serial number on the flaperon confirms that it is from Flight 370, then the laboratory can use sophisticated tools to try to glean more information about the causes of the crash, such as whether its shape corresponds more to a midair explosion or a crash into the ocean. REUTERS

Quoted

"We know the flaperon has been officially identified as being part of a Boeing 777 aircraft."

Transport Minister Liow Tiong Lai said in a statement.

Five things you need to know

1 Obama to unveil tougher climate change plan

President Barack Obama will unveil on Monday the final version of his plan to tackle greenhouse gases from coal-fired power plants, kicking off what is expected to be a tumultuous legal battle against federal environmental regulators by the coal industry and its political allies.

The revised Clean Power Plan will seek to slash carbon emissions from the power sector by 32 percent by 2030 from 2005 levels, a 9 percent increase over a previous proposal, a senior White House official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity ahead of Monday's official launch.

The regulation is aimed at ushering in a sweeping transformation of the U.S. electricity sector, encouraging an aggressive shift toward more renewable energy away from coal-fired electricity.

Industry groups and some lawmakers from states that have relied on coal-based energy have vowed to challenge it in the courts and through congressional maneuvers, accusing the administration of a regulatory assault that will drive up energy prices.

The White House took a defiant stance, saying the release of the plan was "the starting gun for an all-out climate push" by the president and his cabinet.

"My administration will release the final version of America's Clean Power Plan, the biggest, most important step we have ever taken to combat climate change," Obama said in a video posted by the White House.

He said there have been no federal limits to date on carbon pollution from power plants, the biggest source of U.S. greenhouse gas emissions.

2 Italy coast guard rescues 1,800 sea migrants, five found dead

Italy's coast guard said about 1,800 migrants were rescued from seven overcrowded vessels on Saturday, while five corpses were found on a large rubber boat carrying 212 others.

The dead bodies were found on board at the time of the rescue, a coast guard spokeswoman said on Sunday. The cause of death was not yet known, she said.

The Mediterranean has become the world's most deadly barrier for migrants and refugees, with 3,500 thought to have died at sea last year and almost 2,000 so far this year. Many are fleeing poverty and violence in the Middle East and Africa.

Italy has had about 90,000 sea migrant arrivals so far this year, after receiving 170,000 in 2014.

3 Kerry says US, Egypt return to 'stronger base' in ties

The United States and Egypt are returning to a "stronger base" in bilateral ties despite tensions and human rights concerns, Secretary of State John Kerry said on Sunday after talks with his Egyptian counterpart.

"Egypt remains vital ... to engagement and stability in the region as a whole," said Kerry, who held the first strategic dialogue between the two countries since 2009.

"There are obviously circumstances where we have found reason to have grave concern and we have expressed it very publicly," he said at a news conference with Foreign Minister Sameh Shukri. "But we have multiple issues that we need to work on simultaneously."

U.S.-Egyptian relations cooled after Islamist president Mohamed Mursi was ousted in 2013 by the military amid mass protests against his rule.

4 Verizon's workers say no strike for now, union talks continue

Verizon Communications and the unions representing its wireline unit employees on the East Coast said work will go on and talks continue after their current contract expired.

Since June, the unions have been in talks with Verizon over the company's plans to cut costs by controlling health care and pension-related benefits over a three-year period.

Last week, the Communications Workers of America (CWA) and International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers that represent over 37,000 wireline employees said they had voted to go on strike, if needed, after their contract expired on Aug. 1 at midnight.

The unions want extra benefits in addition to job security provisions.

5 BMW CEO hints there is space for more electric models

The chief executive of BMW hinted in a German paper that there was potential for another of its "i" electric car models.

"Between the i3 and the i8, there is space if you look at it from the number point of view," Harald Krueger told Frankfurter Allgemeine Sonntagszeitung, when asked if he was planning new models.

He added that he could not give any more details at present.

Krueger also said BMW was in regular contact with major technology companies, including Apple, over connected cars.

California wildfire grows

A wildfire along Northern California's inland coastal range has now burned nearly 46,000 acres and forced the closure of two highways, officials said on Sunday, after a second blaze near the Oregon border killed a firefighter. The Rocky Fire in Lake County, north of San Francisco, has grown in size by about 20,000 acres, according to Cal Fire, a state website for fire information. The fire has closed parts of Highway 20 and Highway 16, destroyed 24 homes and 26 more outbuildings, and threatens an additional 6,301 structures, according to Cal Fire. REUTERS

1 Naomi Campbell, convicted paparazzo-basher

She's definitely got conviction(s). ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Supermodel Naomi Campbell is not one you should mess with, which comes as no surprise to anyone who remembers the whole "Blackberry to the housekeeper's head" incident back in 2006. And just three years later, in 2009, she reportedly hit an Italian photographer in the face with her designer purse, scratching his eye. And now she's been convicted of assault in that case, earning a six-month suspended prison sentence, according to the Telegraph. "We are appealing the ruling surrounding the 2009 incident," her attorney says in a statement. So how badass is Naomi Campbell? She has a subsection of her Wikipedia page titled "Assault cases." Plural. So there.

The movies sing 'Uptown Funk'

This one obviously took a lot of work to put together. Incorrigible Internet mash-up video-maker Don Draper Says What has collected a dizzying array of movies from across Hollywood history and sliced and diced them until they come together to sing-speak the lyrics to "Uptown Funk." To be honest, it's the first time I've actually been clear on what some of the lines are. And while there certainly could've been other clips out there with characters saying "watch," do you really need anything other than Christopher Walken in "Pulp Fiction"? No, you don't.

@DONDRAPERSAYSWHAT / YOUTUBE

2 Charlize Theron adopts again

Charlize Theron is a mom once more. The "Dark Places" star has adopted a second child, an African-American baby girl, according to E! News. Theron also has a son, Jackson, 3, whom she adopted in 2012. Theron's new daughter is named August and was born in the U.S. in, awkwardly, July. Still, I guess "July" would've been a pretty silly name.

Meanwhile, Theron has finally had to actually talk to ex-boyfriend Sean Penn after reportedly ghosting on their relationship. The pair were reunited in South Africa last week for reshoots on their upcoming movie "The Last Face." That must have not been awkward at all, right?

3 Channing Tatum signs his 'Gambit' deal

So those rumors last week that Channing Tatum was pulling out "Gambit"? Yeah, not so much. The "Magic Mike" star has closed his deal for the "X-Men" spin-off, according to Variety, and will star as the card-slinging fan-favorite Cajun mutant. There's even talk of his character being the new linchpin across the X-franchise, since Hugh Jackman and Jennifer Lawrence are putting their mutant days behind them. So what was the deal with last week's scuttlebutt about Tatum bailing? Maybe a negotiating tactic by Fox or Tatum's team to move things along? Pretty sneaky, C-Tates.

• Summer is all about festivals, and you don't want to miss Night Market. They're taking over Lancaster Avenue on Aug. 6 from 6 to 10 p.m. Come hungry!

• Every Wednesday to Saturday, the Pennsylvania Dutch travel from Lancaster to Philadelphia's Reading Terminal Market to sell their delicious baked treats, dried meats and some of the best soft pretzels I have ever eaten. And in August, they not only bring their amazing treats but come around with a petting zoo and horse-drawn wagon rides during the annual Pennsylvania Dutch Festival, Aug. 6-8.

• It's been considered quite a spectacle, but it's really all in good fun. I'm talking, of course, about the Philly Naked Bike Ride. A few thousand of your closest friends strip down to whatever level they are most comfortable with (some bare all) and take a scenic bike ride through the streets. With the addition of Indego, there is no telling how many new riders will be checking a bike for the day. Circle the date: Aug. 29 at 3 p.m.

• Music lovers will be glad to hear that everyone is touring and passing right through our city this month: Earth Wind and Fire, Billy Joel, Phish, Zac Brown Band, Jimmy Buffett, Meghan Trainor and, of course, the Mad Decent Block Party. If you are a fan of live music, it's going to be a good month for you!

• As a die-hard Philadelphia sports fan, I'm also very excited for football season! I'm looking forward to the Eagles' free open practices on Tuesday, Aug. 4, and Sunday, Aug. 9.

• I'm also loving the outdoor movie series this summer. Every Thursday in August, a film will be screened under the stars at Penn's Landing. The Schuylkill Banks Movie Series includes films at Grays Ferry Crescent by Walnut Street and at the Paine's Park skatepark.

3 Natanya DiBona

• On Aug. 7, I'm off to enjoy the members' preview of Things Beyond Resemblance: James Welling Photographs at the Brandywine River Museum of Art in Chadds Ford. It is always a great time to reconnect with other members of the museum's Young Friends while we take in works by this L.A.-based artist.

• No summer is complete without enjoying a performance (or two) by Martha Graham Cracker. As a rabid and longtime fan, I wouldn't dream about missing her 10th anniversary show, Aug. 22 at Union Transfer.

• On Aug. 26, I'll be attending the FringeArts outdoor movie screening of "Dirty Dancing" at La Peg. I will be the one carrying a watermelon.

• The Under the Sun Tour on Saturday, Aug. 22, at Xfinity Live! is totally my jam with all my favorite bands like Sugar Ray, Better Than Ezra, Uncle Kracker and Eve 6.

• I'll be heading out for Center City Restaurant Week at Vesper. I love the vibe, the food and, of course, the cocktails.

• Every Wednesday, you can find me at Center City Sips, at my new spot Uptown Beer Garden or one of the other hot spots nearby. When it's not a Sips night, look for me at Ashton Cigar Bar, Stratus Lounge and El Vez.

• I can't get enough of Spruce Street Harbor Park at Penn's Landing. I spent nearly all summer there last year and plan to finish August by sneaking away for fun on the river as much as I can. I'll also be hitting up the PECO Multicultural Series at Penn's Landing with the Festival of India on Aug. 15 and Caribbean Festival on Aug. 16.

• Philly is all about great music. Thursday nights, I'll be dancing outside at the Dell Music Center. It's a great chance to get up-close-and-personal with your favorite performers. The ones to watch on my list are definitely Tyrese and Anthony Hamilton on Aug. 6 and Erykah Badu on Aug. 13.

• The great thing about working so early in the morning is that I have all afternoon to explore great restaurants near the station. In Old City, I'll be sipping mojitos at Cuba Libre or enjoying watermelon feta gazpacho at The Continental. On the weekends, you can find me brunching on South Street at Bridget Foy's with red velvet doughnut holes and a glass of sangria.

• Philly Geek Awards (Aug. 15) is one of my favorite events of the year! I love that Philadelphia has a community to discuss technology and innovation to improve our lives. The geek community is so strong, and it's a great chance for folks to come from behind their nerdy glasses, let their hair down and honor each other.

• Diner en Blanc Philadelphia on Aug. 20 is not to be missed. It is always amazing to me that two locals had such vision and leadership to bring this global event to Philadelphia [and] put their own Philly spin on it. One year, I guessed the location ahead of time. We'll see if I'm right again this year.

• "Dreamgirls" star Sheryl Lee Ralph brings her DIVAS Simply Singing benefit concert to Philadelphia for the first time at the Dell (Aug. 22). The show celebrates 25 years and is the country's longest running HIV/AIDS benefit. I have a special connection as I saw it 23 years ago in Washington — that was the first time I saw Sheryl perform live and, boy, was I wowed.

• On the celebrity front, I'll be on the lookout for Josh Brolin, Maggie Gyllenhaal and Olivia Munn filming "Three Seconds." It will be a chance to return to my roots as the city's paparazzo. I might even share secrets about where they are taping on Philly Chit Chat and Twitter. Stay tuned.

HOW TO GET AHEAD

jobs & education

This 19-year-old is changing the way kids engage with science

Sara Sakowitz launched a subscription science-experiment service from her dorm room — and it's blowing up.

RAQUEL LANERI
Ⓐ RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Sara Sakowitz is 19 years old. She's also an award-winning cancer researcher, innovator and entrepreneur whose business could revolutionize education.

The Columbia University sophomore launched Blue Moon Box — a monthly subscription service that sends science-experiment kits right to kids' doorsteps — from her college dorm room with her friend Soham Daga in March. What started as a way to get Daga's sister interested in science soon snowballed into a full-blown Kickstarter-backed business (it raised $16,000) featured on "Good Morning America."

"I never expected it to be more than just a project that I worked on before winter break," says Sakowitz, who soon was getting requests for more boxes for play-dates, classrooms and more. "By the time I got back, we were trying to keep up with the pace of the demand, and it was clear to me that this was something much larger."

Now, Blue Moon Box has more than 400 subscribers in 42 states throughout the country, including Hawaii. We asked the New Yorker — who has just won a 10 Under 20: Young Innovators to Watch award — about why Blue Moon Box has gotten so popular.

From scientist to business owner

"I started this process without any experience or training or knowledge about running a business," says Sakowitz. "I encounter new challenges every single day — from figuring out where I was going to buy all these materials wholesale to finding fulfillment centers for distribution. But I'm very willing to learn — whether that's going to Barnes and Noble and reading for hours, finding books about marketing at the library or even just Googling and Googling more. ... I really want to learn everything."

Sara Sakowitz

Inside Blue Moon Box

Interested in subscribing? Here's what you need to know.

- Each box focuses on a specific scientific theme — such as rocketry or chemical explosions.
- Sakowitz writes a storybook for each month's theme, featuring a mystery adventure that kids solve through doing specific science experiments.
- Each box includes all the materials and ingredients needed for that month's experiments, along with step-by-step instructions.
- Prices range from $25 for a one-time delivery to $210 for a 12-month subscription.

It encourages kids to get their hands dirty

Sakowitz first fell in love with science one day when she mixed baking soda and vinegar to create an erupting volcano. "Those little kitchen-table experiments gave me the tools to explore my world and the science behind it from a really early age," she says. "I wanted to give kids that same experience."

Kids aren't getting the science education they need in the classroom

Studies have shown that "learning by doing" helps students perform better in science. Yet, as schools face shrinking budgets, teachers don't have the resources to incorporate hands-on learning into their classes. "So kids are learning scientific concepts from worksheets or PowerPoint presentations, and they're not experiencing that magic you get when you do it yourself," says Sakowitz.

That leads to more and more kids thinking science is hard. Indeed, almost 60 percent of students who begin high school interested in science and math change their minds by graduation. "I wanted to show kids that science is approachable and fun."

Science is the future

More than just fun — and lucrative — science is vital. "Think about all the problems in the world," says Sakowitz, "from climate change to all of these diseases coming back because they're resistant to the medicines we have. We need future generations to face those challenges head-on, and they're going to need science to do that."

How to turn your Ph.D. into a job

Only 50-60 percent of Ph.D. candidates finish their dissertation within 10 years of starting graduate school. ISTOCK

Don't let those 10 years of graduate school go to waste.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Thinking about getting a Ph.D.? Most experts will tell you it's a bad idea. Students, on average, take between seven and 10 years to complete their degree — if they finish it at all.

Plus, it's gotten increasingly difficult to get a job in academia, with universities replacing tenured professors with adjuncts — who often earn, according to Karen Kelsky, "Wal-Mart wages."

Which is why Kelsky, a former professor, started blogging about the academic job market and offering consulting services.

"I knew my graduate students were desperate and scared about this job market yet weren't getting the information they needed to deal with it," says Kelsky, whose new book is "The Professor is In: The Essential Guide to Turning Your Ph.D. Into a Job." We asked her for some of her tips.

Don't get obsessed with your thesis

Graduate school isn't just about doing research 24/7: It's also about getting a job.

"People go to graduate school because they imagine they're going to have a career at the end of it," says Kelsky.

That means starting your job search on the first day. "Look at the job ads and ask: 'What are employers looking for, and how can I orient myself to be a candidate for this job?'" she advises. Teaching experience — not just as a T.A., but as the leader of your own class, will help, too.

Think of your thesis as a means to a job

Still, your dissertation is very important and having the right topic is key. "It should be timely and about something your field considers important or relevant," says Kelsky. Students should be able to figure out whether a topic is a good one from observing their field and talking with their advisor.

And, as you're writing, think about what chapters you can isolate for publication. "You have to publish at least one journal article during grad school — and probably more than one — before you go on the market," Kelsky says.

Keep your options open

Just because you're in graduate school doesn't mean you have to go into academia. After all, Ph.D. candidates have many skills that are valued in all different kinds of job markets — from public speaking to statistics to writing on deadline.

"I understand that it can be very painful and difficult to let go of the identity of professor or academic because a Ph.D. takes so many years," says Kelsky. "But if you do it, this whole world opens up to you, and you see all the skills you have and all the directions you can go. So I encourage people to do that even while they're in grad school before it's forced on them by sort of a crisis situation."

Eagles training camp

Kendricks not on the block

For all those Eagles fans who worried that after Brandon Boykin's 11th-hour trade last night to the Steelers that Mychal Kendricks could be next, rest assured. "Mychal Kendricks isn't going anywhere," Chip Kelly said when he addressed the media Sunday. "You can write that down in ink, not pencil."

Bradford looks like shoe-in to start as Birds quarterback

NFL. If Sam Bradford can stay healthy and get back to game speed, he'll be the Week 1 starter.

Sam Bradford looked loose and comfortable during first-team reps at Eagles training camp Sunday. / GETTY IMAGES

What QB competition?

The Eagles look like they have their starter, and it only took one day of training camp.

Sam Bradford, though a little rusty-looking at times, took first-team reps during camp at the NovaCare Center on Sunday and was, as Chip Kelly said, "good to go."

"Right now he's gonna go until we see how his knee responds," Kelly said. "He feels really confident, he is right back where he wanted to be."

Bradford shared first-team reps with Mark Sanchez in minicamp a month and a half ago and didn't take any snaps in 11-on-11 drills. Sunday, the highly paid quarterback was unrestricted.

"It was good to get back out there," Bradford said after practice. "It's been a long time since I've been out there as a part of team drills. It felt good, obviously getting adjusted to the speed again."

Acquired from the Rams back in the spring for Nick Foles and a second-round draft pick, Bradford spent most of his six-week break in Philly getting ready for what he called a "big first step," his first full practice and first without a knee brace.

"I am good to go," he said, "you might even see me pull one, run it up the middle …"

Though he didn't do too much scrambling, he certainly did show off his rocket arm. His timing may have been a bit off but it appeared the starting job was, more or less his, as Sanchez took second-team reps and Tim Tebow split the third-team reps with Matt Barkley.

So for the next two weeks, prior to the Eagles Aug. 16 date against the Colts to open the preseason, training camp for Bradford will be about getting ready for contact and game speed.

"I'm sure once we get into preseason games and it's real, that will be another step," Bradford said.

When asked if he expected to be the starter when the season started, the former No. 1 pick smiled and said he did [if all went according to plan].

Girls of the gridiron

Football. The Legends Football League is gaining in popularity, but there's backlash too.

LFL players show plenty of leg on gameday. / LEGENDS FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Football has long been called a "collision sport."

When two tornadoes of sweaty breasts, plastic helmets, shoulder pads, tanned legs and exposed midriffs slam into one another each week on the Fuse network, it makes for one hell of a spectacle. But that spectacle isn't enjoyed by all. In fact, the Legends Football League is downright offensive to some.

The LFL, formerly the Lingerie Football League, was rebranded in 2013 in order to make it a more viable product to a general audience. Still, concerns that the league is demeaning toward women and concerns that the women who play in the LFL are put in an unsafe environment remain.

"We wanted more of the media and fan attention to be directed toward the athleticism of the players and the overall integrity of the sport versus simply its sex appeal," LFL owner Mitchell Mortaza told Metro about the rebrand. "Most media outlets or individuals that complain about the LFL uniforms or the outward perception of the sport have spent very little, if any, time actually exploring the sport. ... Those media outlets and individuals who have seen the sport understand how real it is and why these women are truly incredible athletes."

LFL notes

A look at the LFL:

- The league held its first event, The Lingerie Bowl," at halftime of Super Bowl XXXVIII in 2004 — the same Super Bowl halftime in which Janet Jackson's breast was shown live during a "wardrobe malfunction."
- There are currently six teams in the LFL located in Chicago, Atlanta, Omaha, the Seattle Mist, Los Angeles and Las Vegas.

Too much skin?

Lauran Ziegler is a wide receiver and free safety for the Atlanta Steam. The former college softball player wanted to stay in competitive sports and has become one of the faces of the LFL as the league continues to gain popularity through its national TV deal.

"The talent level has 100 percent improved since when I started in the league [in 2011]," Ziegler told Metro. "We're real athletes that just happen to wear a lot less clothing than the majority of sports. We wear just as much clothing as beach volleyball players, just as much as swimmers."

Ziegler and the LFL maintain that the skimpy outfits are worn during play simply to draw initial attention to the sport. After the viewer is drawn in, the LFL then says there's instant appreciation for the way the players go about playing the game.

"We know what we're signing up for when we start in the league. Unfortunately, we have to sell tickets to get people to the game," Ziegler said. "After the game, no one ever says anything about the uniform. It's always, 'Oh man, I can't believe how hard you guys hit.'

"We know that a lot of [our audience], when they first hear about it or see it, it's 'Yeah, I want to see hot chicks in bathing suits,'" Ziegler added. "But then they keep watching the game and then they appreciate the athleticism."

LFL gets its fair share of criticism

Football. Specialists speak out against the Legends Football League.

Dr. Mary Jo Kane is a professor in the School of Kinesiology at the University of Minnesota and is the director of the Tucker Center for Research on Girls & Women in Sport. Kane doesn't yet buy that the LFL has evolved into a legitimate pro sports league since it debuted in 2004.

"They've been saying similar things for a decade. Why are they still struggling to get legitimacy?" Kane told Metro. "When you say you are a pro sports league and the focus is on lingerie, you take away from the game. You're sexualizing female athletes and then pretending that it's something different. This isn't a criticism of the individual women who play and may want to use this as a stepping stone to something else. But should we take this seriously as a pro sports enterprise? No."

Kane stopped short of saying the league flat-out "exploits women." But she does have a problem with the way the LFL says it "re-branded" itself two years ago.

"Using a word like 'Legends' implies that it's athletes who have already accomplished greatness in their sport, like the 'Legends Tour' in golf," Kane said. "Football is a game of force, and how do those uniforms allow you to accomplish the task [of tackling]? If this is how they want to sell and promote the league, that's fine. Just don't insult our intelligence by pretending this is a serious sports enterprise."

FANTASY FOOTBALL: KEEP THESE GUYS ON YOUR RADAR FOR PPR

It's over for the compact disc, fax machine and jean shorts (aka jorts). Standard scoring fantasy football leagues are heading down the same path.

Many leagues now give out a full point per reception (PPR), drastically changing the values of many players. Two-down backs like Alfred Morris, Chris Ivory and even Marshawn Lynch take a hit. So do lower-volume deep threats like DeSean Jackson and Vincent Jackson. The players below are the ones to target in PPR formats.

Landry day

Jarvis Landry isn't very big and isn't very fast. But he's tough, has great hands and knows how to get open underneath à la Hines Ward. That's good, because that's the area of the field Ryan Tannehill excels. We can expect a ton more check-downs to Landry this year, giving him 90-catch upside despite all the mouths to feed in Miami. Just don't take him in standard-scoring leagues because his aDOT (average depth of target) will be among the weakest in the NFL.

Spilling over

The Doug Marrone Bills regime did not know how to use C.J. Spiller's sizable yet unique talents. We can be sure the Saints do. Satellite backs that excel in the pass game have a long track record with Sean Payton, as evidenced by Darren Sproles/Pierre Thomas combining for 148 receptions in 2013 and Thomas/Travaris Cadet netting 83 last year. The Saints gave Spiller a $16M contract in March, the exact same as Mark Ingram. And with Jimmy Graham, Kenny Stills and Thomas all gone, Spiller will be relied upon as a core piece of the pass game.

Miami's Jarvis Landry has 90-catch potential in 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

Woodhead return

It's easier to go with the "zero RB" strategy in full-PPR leagues. That's because the backs that are available to us in the later rounds are the passing-down backs, not the feature backs. One of the best third-down and no-huddle options is Danny Woodhead, who caught 76 passes and six touchdowns from Philip Rivers two years ago and then broke his leg last year. The Woodman is an ideal real-life complement to rookie Melvin Gordon, who did not show much at all in the pass game while at Wisconsin.

LEGAL NOTICES

STATE OF WISCONSIN
CIRCUIT COURT
CIVIL DIVISION
MILWAUKEE COUNTY

Bank Mutual
Plaintiff, vs.
Yusuf Bashir
Defendant.

PUBLICATION SUMMONS
Case No. 15-CV-3838

TO EACH PERSON NAMED ABOVE AS A DEFENDANT:

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that the plaintiff named above has filed a lawsuit or other legal action against you. The complaint, which is also served upon you, states the nature and basis of the legal action.

Within forty (40) days after July 27, 2015, you must respond with a written answer, as that term is used in chapter 802 of the Wisconsin Statutes, to the complaint. The court may reject or disregard an answer that does not follow the requirements of the statutes. The answer must be sent or delivered to the court, whose address is Clerk of Courts, Milwaukee County Courthouse, 901 N. Ninth Street, Milwaukee, WI 53233, and to Stupar, Schuster & Bartell, S.C., Plaintiff's attorney, whose address is 633 W. Wisconsin Ave. #1800, Milwaukee WI 53203. You may have an attorney help or represent you.

If you do not provide a proper answer within forty (40) days, the Court may grant judgment against you for the award of money or other legal action requested in the Complaint, and you may lose your right to object to anything that is or may be incorrect in the Complaint. A judgment awarding money may become a lien against any real estate you own now or in the future, and may also be enforced by garnishment or seizure of property.
